MAKE YOUR OWN BAYEUX TAPESTRY

The Bayeux Tapestry was a large embroidered piece created to tell the story of the Norman invasion through images. Think of it as a timeline of a picture-based story - this will help to inspire your project!

During lockdown, a lot will have changed for your children and they're bound to have their own unique and fun stories to tell. So why not encourage them to tell their own tales this way? Using a long strip of paper (old wallpaper is ideal) and pens and paints to decorate, they can create their own Bayeux Tapestry about their lockdown journeys. Whilst referring back to the tapestry itself for inspiration, kids will find out about the processes involved, the stories behind it and why it's still taught in schools today.
